KEY TAKEAWAYS

Despite being financial professionals' most searched stocks, large-cap tech companies such as Apple (AAPL), Tesla (TSLA), Amazon (AMZN), and Nvidia (NVDA) lost search volume from Q3 to Q4 2022.

Stocks with the biggest surges in searches continued to be small- and micro-cap biotech companies, but several names in the oil and gas sector, including APA (APA) and FuelCell Energy (FCEL), also made the list.

Wheat futures ETF Teucrium Wheat (WEAT) rose to #1 on our surging ETFs list while wheat futures fell to nearly half their Q1 price. This is a must-watch for 2023.

KEY TAKEAWAYS

Retail investors' top searches followed similar patterns to financial pros'. But retail investors were more active in their research, with 8 of the top 10 stocks seeing more than double the pageviews from the prior quarter.

Despite news of retail traders pulling back from the market, the top surgers for the quarter were almost exclusively micro- and small-cap biotech stocks, a staple among day traders.

Notably, pageviews for the SPDR S&P 500 ETF (SPY) more than doubled after the CBOE introduced same-day expiration options on SPY five days a week.
